Korra and Asami's Unexpected Descent from the Sky, Rae and Claire's Confusion, and May and Aleah's Wonder [Updated Version]

Posted originally on the SquidgeWorld Archive at http://squidgeworld.org/works/92250.

Rating:	Teen And Up Audiences
Archive Warning:	No Archive Warnings Apply
Category:	F/F
Fandoms:	Avatar: Legend of Korra, 私の推しは悪役令嬢 - いのり | Watashi no Oshi wa Akuyaku Reijou | I'm in Love with the Villainess - Inori, 私の推しは悪役令嬢 | Watashi no Oshi wa Akuyaku Reijou | I'm in Love with the Villainess [Manga]
Relationships:	Claire Francois/Rae Taylor | Oohashi Rei, Korra/Asami Sato, Aleah Francois & Claire Francois & May Francois & Rae Taylor, Aleah Francois & May Francois
Characters:	Korra [Avatar], Asami Sato, Claire Francois, May Francois, Aleah Francois, Rae Taylor | Oohashi Rei
Additional Tags:	Originally Posted on Sunset, Bisexual Female Character, Established Korra/Asami Sato, Bisexual Character(s), Firebending & Firebenders, Waterbending & Waterbenders, Adoption, Airbending & Airbenders, Magic, Cooking, Korrasami Fangirl Rae, Post-Canon, Post-The Legend of Korra, Korra and Asami learn the truth?, Queer Themes, LGBTQ+ Themes, Crossovers & Fandom Fusions, Fandom Allusions & Cliches & References, Rae explains what different queer labels mean, Baking, Other Characters Not Mentioned In Tags, Manaria Sousse mentioned, Lilly Lilium mentioned, Jealousy, Pema mentioned, Lin Beifong mentioned, Healing, Podfic Welcome, Constructive Criticism Welcome, Comments Welcome, Word Count: 2500 to 7499, Female Character of Color
Language:	English
Series:	Part 1 of Originally on Sunset
Stats:	Published: 2026-04-17 Words: 4,434 Chapters: 1/1

Korra and Asami's Unexpected Descent from the Sky, Rae and Claire's Confusion, and May and Aleah's Wonder [Updated Version]

by lefemmerouge

Summary

One day, a brown-skinned woman, with dark brown hair, and her girlfriend, with raven-colored hair, fall from the sky, surprising Rae, Claire, May, and Aleah. As they continue talking, each of them learns a bit about themselves. They connect over everything each of them has been through, in their efforts to fight evildoers and bring peace, and Korra and Asami learn a shocking truth about their lives which shakes them both to their core.

Notes

Some time ago, I saw a prompt on a certain site ("Should have some or all of the following: Femslash, teasing, yuri, fangirls, and/or implied sexual content") on here and this fic fulfills it. In my original A/N on AO3 (in mid-November 2024) I said that I had planned to write a fic in which Korra and Manaria fight, adding that this fic is set after volume two of the ILTV light novel series, when Claire and Rae have settled into their new, and peaceful, lives. This is focuses more on talking with someone else about their experiences, rather than a battle, something which Rae, Claire, Korra, and Asami would appreciate, after everything they have been through. I started writing this original fic after finishing volume two of the aforementioned light novel and finished it after my Legend of Korra rewatch. It also relied upon information from the I'm in Love with the Villainess Wiki, Avatar Wiki, and my knowledge of the manga and light novels. Although Korra can Earthbend as well, those abilities aren't shown in this story.

This fic was also posted on Quotev, Wattpad (with a shortened title), here (listed in inspirations), and Asianfanfics. Collectively, it garnered 102 hits/views across those sites, plus 450 hits on AO3, over 20 kudos, 2 bookmarks, and multiple comments. It was also noted as an inspiration for the fic "Hailey Meets... the Villainess and her... Girlfriend?", which was posted on Sunset under the title "Hailey Meets... the Arrogant Villainess and her... Fawning Girlfriend?", with the addition of 295 words, including making Scott Denoga as non-binary, and Becker Denoga autistic, along with other changes.

This fic expands from the original word count of 3,582 to the current word count of 4,484, with the addition of 902 words (about 25.2%), plus changing the fic's summary, and title from the original ("Korra and Asami's Unexpected Descent, Rae and Claire's Confusion, and May and Aleah's Wonder") to the current title, which I used on Squidge World. I made it more gay at various points by expanding and updating text.

I hope you all enjoy this fic! Comments, and constructive criticism, are welcome and appreciated.

See the end of the work for more notes

- Inspired by Korra and Asami's Unexpected Descent from the Sky, Rae and Claire's Confusion, and May and Aleah's Wonder by lefemmerouge

Claire was attempting to make an upside-down cake with yellowish fruit. In another world, it would have been called a pineapple, but in this world it was called a "yellow spiky fruit," which was a more fitting name. In any case, she was not successful. She didn't know how Rae had cooked so many perfect meals for her. Had she been a cook in her previous life? She guessed that perhaps she had been although she wasn't entirely sure.

Even now, she didn't know much about Rae's previous life. Rae hadn't told her that much. She didn't care about that now. What mattered was their happiness together and that their daughters, May and Aleah, were content. Although May and Aleah were adopted, both she and Rae treated them as their own. Claire cried out. She was despondent. Her dish had been burned to a crisp. "Rae, can you please help?...I did it again."

Rae came running in from outside their quaint cottage, which sat in the beautiful countryside, among rolling green hills. Claire had been so loud that she could clearly hear her voice, even when she was a quarter of a mile away. Her deep love of Claire, in her previous life and in her current life, meant that she was well attuned to her voice. Hearing it everyday, and the fact they were living happily ever after (in a sense), brought her immense joy. She wouldn't trade anything for being there with her. She was so glad that she had been reincarnated in this world and got to spend time with Miss Claire. She was grateful for it every single day.

Using her water magic, she put out the fire in an instant. The smoke dissipated. "Miss Claire...it's okay," she said, while caressing her partner's head. Although Claire would have once raised a stink with Rae, telling her as a commoner to not touch her that was because it was "improper" to do so, she had gotten used to being lovingly touched on the head. This tranquil and sweet moment would soon be interrupted in a way that neither one of them would ever expect.

Aleah and May rushed inside the cottage with a look of sheer terror on their faces. They were horrified by what they had seen. Neither one could fully use magic yet. May was slowly learning to be a quad-caster and Aleah was testing out her spell sword ability. "Mother Claire, some ladies dropped from the sky," Aleah stated as she shook. She was concerned about what would happen to these women. What if they died? What if... May followed up what her sister had said, cutting off her thoughts. She nearly teased her moms. "And both of them are really pretty like you, Mother Rae...and Mother Claire."

Although May's pause annoyed Claire a little, she was glad that her daughter recognized beauty, especially in women. As some say, beauty is in the eye of the beholder. She hoped that May would find a good woman to be attracted to. She already knew that Aleah had a crush on Lilly

Lilium, and that she adored her sister, but after everything that went down with the romance between Lene and Lambert, she never wanted something like that to ever happen again.

Rae and Claire told their daughters to stay put. As Rae closed the door behind her partner, they approached the two woman who were huddled on the ground. A brown-skinned, and blue-eyed person, with dark brown hair, put her hands over the tan-skinned and black-haired woman next to her. She did this in an attempt to protect her. She loudly shouted at them. "I won't let you touch MY girlfriend!"

Weakened from the unexpected fall from the sky, she couldn't even summon her elemental powers. She was unable to say anything more than yelling at them. She slumped on top of the other woman, who was much more friendly. Rae an Claire were grateful for that, especially when they wanted to help these women in some way. Although she didn't say it, Claire couldn't think about how how rude the brown-skinned woman was. What was her problem?

"I'm Asami Sato, and this is my girlfriend, Korra," she began. She then made a request. She felt she had no choice to to request it. She pleaded with them. "I'm not as badly injured from the fall…but she is…can you please treat her?"

Asami knew this was a big ask. At the same time, she felt she had to ask them. Who else was out there in the country? If they said no, she wasn't sure what she would do. So, she was really chancing it with this request.

Rae was a bit concerned. She didn't remember anyone like this from the game. She was unsure where they came from or why they had appeared in front of their cottage rather than somewhere inside of the city instead. Even so, she felt an obligation to help them because… they were girls in love… On top of all of that, they really looked like they cared about each other. And isn't that what mattered?

"Okay, sure, I'll treat her. I promise. You can come in too, Miss Sato."

As she entered into the cottage with Rae (who was carrying Korra), and Claire, she remarked, "It's fine, there's no need to be that formal. Call me Asami." Rae accepted this. Even so she predicted it might make Claire "jelly." She sometimes teased her about this. She had done so when Claire was not happy about how close Lilly, that cardinal who had proposed marriage to Rae so many times she couldn't count, was getting to Rae.

Sure enough, Claire was red-faced after Rae said the words "Sure, Asami." She grumbled. She felt a bit hurt. "Why can't you do that with ME, Rae? You can call me Claire…there's no need for the 'Miss' anymore."

Rae, who was blushing almost as much as the woman she loved, replied. "It's too embarrassing...I'm just used to calling you...Miss Claire."

"That's not fair, Rae!" Claire retorted, while lightly punching her in the arm. Her teasing was one of the many reasons that Rae loved her so much. She was grateful for every day she got to spend with Miss Claire. She needed no god, no higher power. She had Miss Claire all to herself. That's what mattered to her. She'd love to stay with Claire forever if she could. That would be her wish.

The girls were amazed. May and Aleah had seen women with the same skin complexion as Asami before, when they went on outings to the nearby town and the big city. However, Korra...was different. Not many people with skin that dark brown lived in these parts of the Bauer Kingdom, which remained peaceful, for now. Everyone hoped it stayed that way.

Rae used her healing magic on Korra, who had a nasty gash on her side from the fall. She could tell that Korra had been through a lot and guessed that the same was the case for Asami. She wasn't always the best at noticing these things. Something about them seemed familiar, like she had seen them somewhere in her former world, although she couldn't be completely sure. Her memory was vague from her times back them.

Korra suddenly awoke and stretched. She looked around and was confused. Where was she? She suddenly remembered that she had been falling from the sky and that two women approached her after she landed on the ground. She suddenly saw two golden-haired girls staring at her. She realized they were curious about her. While flexing her muscles could work with some, she decided to do something else instead.

"Would you girls like to see something cool?"

May and Aleah looked toward Rae and Claire for approval. "Can Miss Korra show us something?...Please Mother Rae and Mother Claire?"

They acquiesced to the request from their daughters. Who could resist them when they looked so cute? Claire gave a word of a caution. "It's okay if she does a demonstration outside the house. I don't want a mess in here"

"Okay, Mother Claire," Aleah said, sweetly. Her heart almost melted when she heard these words. She was so glad that Aleah, as well as May, were her daughters.

She and May held Korra's hands and led her outside. Rae came behind them both, while Claire stayed back with Asami. She hoped to learn more about them both, although she didn't have fuzzy memories of her like Rae did. She had never met or seen Korra nor Asami prior to this. So all of this was new to her. Even so, she was just as curious about her as anyone else.

As the two golden-haired girls watched intently, Korra began using her hands and bending water from a nearby pond, all while she levitated herself in the air. Coming outside after seeing all the wind, Claire was astounded. How could someone do something like that? No one she could recall could even do a feat like this. So, she was amazed by it all.

There was no doubt that Yu was good at water magic and that Thane was good with wind magic. In fact, Yu could use water magic to fight from a distance, either creating ice or water barriers, ice arrows, ice spikes, and standard healing abilities. Rod was a master at using fire magic, allowing him to call forth soldiers of fire to fight on his behalf. The latter could even self-destruct, exploding on his command. This paled in comparison to what Korra could do.

Claire, curious about Korra's abilities, approached. She wanted to see what else this mystery woman could do. She was clearly a dual-caster, but no one else was a quad-caster like sister Manaria, right? That wasn't possible.

"So, you can use water and air magic...what about fire magic...or earth magic? Surely you can't use those too, right? Only a certain woman I know can do that..."

Korra chuckled. She wouldn't mind showing off, especially to someone she considered attractive. She guessed that Asami, who was still inside, was watching. She didn't mind teasing her about it... this time.

"I can use all elemental magic. I am the Avatar after all!" she exclaimed.

When she said that, something clicked for Rae. In her old world, Korra and Asami were the protagonists of an animated series that she thoroughly enjoyed, even though she had some issues with the storyline, and how some characters had been portrayed, as any fan would. Through it all, she had been the biggest-ever Korrasami fan, even arguing with people online about it, including those who paired Korra with men like Bolin or Mako instead. She wrote fan fiction and traveled to several Korrasami-themed conventions. It had been a short-lived period, but she looked back at it fondly. Despite that, she couldn't understand why they were there. It made no sense.

Rae began inner-fangirling. She knew that it would be completely disastrous if she ever revealed anything about who they truly were or how she deeply loved both of their characters. She also knew it could cause a possible fissure with Claire or at the very minimum, make her life a little more complicated. She did her best to hold her feelings inside her. She didn't want them to come out.

Asami rolled her eyes as Korra continued to show off. Although this amazed Aleah, May, and Claire, Rae couldn't get enough of it. When Claire looked over at Rae, she was worried. Rae seemed to be studying every nook and cranny of Korra's movements, which terrified her. She did not want a situation resembling what happened with Manaria or Lilly, whose affections toward Rae had made her jealous, although she obviously would not openly admit this, despite Rae's prodding. She wanted to nip this this in the bud the best way possible without making it seem there was anything going on with how she felt about Rae being attracted to Korra.

"Why don't we all go inside and have some nice desserts that I got from the store? We can have a nice conversation over some tea. We've had enough show and tell for now."

Rae could see exactly what was happening. She decided to tease Claire, a little bit, while recognizing her concerns. She didn't want this to become a rift between them. Not at all.

"Miss Claire, are you jelly?"

She huffed that the accusation, even though it was absolutely true. She couldn't admit that! She tried to deny Rae's claims.

"No, of course I'm not, Rae! I'm just looking out for you…"

Rae shook her head. She knew that Claire was covering for herself on this. She wouldn't have expected otherwise from the woman she loved. She had to clear this up, and now.

"Fine, fine. Let's go inside then. And I'll tell you something that will hopefully set you at ease."

As they all went inside, Aleah and May were a bit disappointed. Even Korra was bummed. She wanted to show off more. Asami was a bit relieved. Even from sitting inside the cottage and watching everything unfold through a window, she could tell that Rae might have feelings for Korra. The last thing she wanted was another romantic interloper. No more romantic drama!

Sitting down at a table, as Rae prepared the desserts, Claire poured the tea into fancy porcelain cups which happened to be sitting out on the table. They sat in silence for a bit. Rae decided to start off.

"I'm sorry, Asami and Korra, but I'm a big fangirl. I loved you in that television series and the graphic novels…they were really the best...I wish the writers had done so much better and had you both kiss when you entered the spirit world...they really didn't do as good a job as they should have...I'm still bummed about that...it is such an amazing honor to meet you both."

She stopped herself before she got too far. She had done exactly what she hadn't meant to do! She had told them they weren't real! Oops! She had stepped in it now.

Claire attempted to tamp this down. She chuckled, trying to laugh it off.

"Oh my sweet Rae says such silly things sometimes, don't worry about it, Korra and Miss Sato...I don't know where she gets all of it...please don't pay what she is saying any mind."

What Claire had said did help, but not with everything. They remained skeptical, especially since Rae had mentioned the "spirit world." Clearly she knew something. How? Wasn't this the first time they'd met? What was going on?

Rae appreciated what Claire had said. Even so, she knew that if she kept this up, it could be a disaster. And she didn't want to hide the truth from them completely either. She had to reveal at least part of the truth.

"Korra...and Asami, can I talk to you both...for a bit...in private?"

They nodded. They wanted to know how she knew about something so personal to their lives, since they had only met that very day (and by accident). They hope she would be honest with them.

Pulling them into a side room, Rae used special magic to obscure their conversation from anyone who was listening, including Claire, May, and Aleah. While this made Claire extremely nervous, she accepted it for now. She hoped that what Rae was doing to tell them would calm things down. Turning to Korra and Asami, and protected from everyone who could hear them, Rae laid on the big reveal.

"Okay, this may come as a shock, but you are both characters in a...uh...television series. They are kinda like movers in Republic City, that you know about. And in my previous world, there were a lot of fans of the show, including those who loved when both of you got together. They dubbed your relationship 'Korrasami,' which combines both your names. And there were some rad graphic novels too...which I loved...a lot."

This news disconcerted Korra and Asami. Were they just puppets of someone else who dictated what they did? Had their lives been completely meaningless? Did they have any control over anything? Or was this all some sort of simulation? They were beginning to lose it. Rae hoped to ease their worries with another comment. She didn't want them to lose their humanity. She decided to make a confession to them which she had told few people.

"Please, don't worry about this, you are real to yourselves. Don't fret about anyone else. This world is even, in fact, an otome game in my former world. I reincarnated here after I died. I haven't even told Claire about that completely, at least not yet. I've tried before but she doesn't believe me...so please keep that a secret."

Korra and Asami looked at each other. They could tell that Rae was being genuine, despite the word "otome game" having no meaning to them. Even so, what she had said had shaken each of them to the core. Korra piped up first.

"Was the series at least popular? I mean, did people like us? Were we mover stars? And why is it Korrasami, not Korrami, Korrsami, or AsaKorra?"

Rae shrugged. How could she answer them without saying too much? She tried to keep it brief. She could never tell them that they were voiced by other people, meaning that their voices, in a sense, were not really their own, or that they were animated. That would completely freak them out. She decided to not tell them that part. She was only lying by omission and in this case she felt it was justified.

"First of all, the company that produced the show screwed over the series over a bit. The creators even had to fight to keep in that scene of you both entering the spirit portal...and yeah I guess you were stars? And yes the order is key! It's Korra x Asami, not Asami x Korra! The order makes clear who is the dominant one and who is the submissive one! It's vitally important issue! The order matters!"

Asami came close to Rae. She was distressed about what Rae had been saying, especially the fact that they might have been stars. At the same time, she had no idea why Rae was so worked about the name order. She did not like that she was being called the "submissive one" and Korra the "dominant one," right? Wasn't it sometimes the other way around? Did that sort of lingo mean anything? Claire would have certainly reacted the same way, since she was similarly confused when Rae insisted on the 'correct' order when telling a story about the love square she was a part of, partially unknowingly, in her former life.

She was doing a lot of hemming and hawing on what she could say. She hoped the show had a positive impact. That was the minimum they could get out of it. She was unsure what else she could say.

"Did our show make a big splash? Do people still talk about it now?"

Rae smiled happily. She was fine with answering those questions at least. It was easy enough to respond. After all, she had been a mega-fan for a while and had avidly followed the news. She wouldn't tell them too much as it would bore them. Even so, she was willing to tell them enough to satisfy her. What did she have to lose?

"Before I was reincarnated in this world, there was still an active group of fans. And people loved it for the queer representation, since both of you were bisexual after all."

They both looked at each other. What the heck she talking about? What does those words mean? No one had ever used those words around them in their entire life.

"Bisexual? Queer? Never heard of that." Korra stated, innocently. These terms seemed strange, especially since she didn't know the history behind them.

Rae forgot that these words didn't exist in their world. She had said something accidental again. She had to at least explain it. It was the minimum she could do, even if neither one ever used it again.

"Okay. Let me give you a brief rundown. So, the word bisexual means that you are romantically attracted to men and women. Queer means that you either aren't heterosexual, like a woman who only loves a man. It can also applies to those who are cisgender, referring to those whose gender corresponds with the sex that is assigned to you when you are born."

This sort of made sense, although Asami still had some questions. She wanted to know more about these labels, these strange words. It was worth knowing about them even though they may never use either one in their entire lives.

"So, Tenzin, who was in love with Pema, and formerly Lin, would be heterosexual, while I would be cisgender since doctors labeled me as a girl when I born, but I identify as a woman. Is that right?"

Rae grinned. Asami was starting to get it. There was more to it. She began to explain a little more. Of course she wouldn't tell them everything. At the same time, she wanted to tell them enough as a start. Providing education to people who had begun to recognize their queer identity was important. There was a right place and time for it. She obviously wouldn't be doing this around a bunch of rapid homophobes.

"Yes, that is correct. Yet it is only scratching the surface. Within the umbrella of 'queer' there are people whose gender identity doesn't align with what a doctor assigned them as birth, people known as 'transgender'. Asexual people have no romantic attraction to anyone. Non-binary people don't identify strictly as male or female. Lesbians are only romantically attracted to women. Pansexual people are attracted to anyone regardless of gender. That's a few examples."

Korra's head was spinning. That was a lot of labels and definitions to remember. Whew! It was a bit confusing!

"...That's a lot, Rae. I don't think I'll use any of those labels for myself, as it's hard to remember all that. Even so, it is...interesting to learn how different cultures do it...thanks for telling us."

As they ended their pleasantries, Asami and Korra thanked Rae for this information. Rae pulled back her special magic bubble. They all rejoined Claire at the table in the house's main room. The tea was still sitting there. It somehow hadn't gone cold thanks to Claire's firebending abilities and a woolen cozy that Rae had made for the teapot. She loved that cozy, although not as much as Rae, obviously. A cozy could never replace a wonderful woman like Rae.

"You were gone for some time. Did you get everything resolved?"

Korra and Asami nodded. Asami spoke first.

"Yes, Miss Claire. Rae told us about things we didn't know before, new words, and new concepts. I can't wait to bring them back to Republic City and tell our friends."

Rae wasn't sure that was the best idea. That wasn't exactly she had intended. So, she attempted to tamp down that enthusiasm. Just because concepts worked well in her old world didn't mean they would work well in the world that Korra, Asami, and their friends inhabited. She didn't want to unnecessarily interfere in another world. Wasn't that the whole point of the Prime Directive in Star Trek after all?

"What I told you are concepts from where I came from. Please don't impose them on another world. Come up with your own labels and ideas...I only wanted to educate you on part of what I know."

Asami and Korra understood what she was saying, even though they couldn't get over the fact that they had been part of a television show and didn't even know about it. They continued chatting for hours and hours with Rae, Claire, Aleah, and May, about every topic under the sun. However, it was clear they couldn't stay forever. Rae knew that. Claire suspected it. Soon enough, an inter-dimensional portal to their world opened outside the cottage. May, Aleah, Rae, and Claire walked with them outside, standing outside their cottage. Korra spoke on behalf of herself and her girlfriend.

"Thank you all for what you have told us and your hospitality. We will never forget you."

Claire came close and hugged them. "Thank you Miss Korra and Miss Sato. Your kindness will always be remembered. Please take care of yourself!" As she said that, the women waved to both of them and kissed each other as they walked through the portal. Rae guessed they had done that for her. In reality, they had done it for themselves as another way to show their love and care for one another.

She turned to Rae, who looked starry-eyed. She still wasn't sure what this was all about. She didn't care about that. At least they were gone. She didn't hate them. Instead she saw both women, but particularly Korra, as romantic interlopers in how they acted toward Rae. Their departure made it easier for her. And that was a good thing from her perspective.

As they walked back to the cottage, with their hands intertwined, Rae whispered into Claire's ear something which caught her off guard. She hadn't thought she would hear this from her. She thought this was all over.

"I was telling the truth about Korra and Asami. They were part of an animated television series from my previous world...named the Legend of Korra."

Claire still wasn't sure if Rae was pulling her leg or not. For now, she was okay with accepting what Rae was saying. She decided to play along.

"Legend of Korra? It should be called 'The Legendary Tales of Korra and Asami' or some other name that brings both of them together."

Rae still liked the original name. She was glad that Claire was taking her seriously. She hugged Claire close and whispered, "don't worry, I'll be with you no matter what. No one will ever pull me away from you."

Claire hugged her back. They remained in an embrace until the sun set over the horizon, and returned inside the cottage, rejoining their two daughters. What adventures remained ahead was up to them and them alone.

End Notes

The line "Neither one could fully use magic yet. May was slowly learning to be a quad-caster and Aleah was testing out her spell sword ability." is inspired by what it says on the I'm in Love with the Villainess Wiki: that Aleah cannot "use magic on her own, but she can absorb every conceivable kind of magic and use it as her own power instead" and that May is a quad-caster (the equivalent of the Avatar in ILTV world) as she "has the highest magical aptitude, super, in all water, fire, wind and earth magic." Aleah's page also lists Lilly Lilium (who has a big crush on Rae and proposed marriage multiple times in volume seven of the ILTV manga) as her love interest.

This fic originally posted on Sunset, a femslash fanfic site. However, it was removed when I was sadly perma-banned for mishandling interactions with a few users, despite apologizing to those users, removing certain passages of fics, and apologizing to the Sunset admin (and others). As such, I would strongly recommend against anyone joining that site, or Superlove. Both admins (Melo/Kat for Superlove, Agnes for Sunset) are friends with each other. Those admins are very particular and not in a good way. I find the whole circumstance deeply unfortunate. I wish it could have been resolved a much better way.

Also, I saved a copy on the Internet Archive. I do not want this fic to be lost. I have not included some tags on there (like Sunset's Femslash Refresh 2026, Exclusive to Sunset, Korra-centric, Asami Sato-centric, and Queer Community) but others have been retained. On Sunset it was listed as part of one series: "My Femslash Refresh 2026 Collection."

Please drop by the Archive and comment to let the creator know if you enjoyed their work!